

Prescott is a unique place. It's a mixture of lively city and stunning natural beauty. Whether you're drawn to the historic downtown or swaths of forest and lake, your Road Chief is the ideal guide to experiencing this southwestern gem.

So, where do you start? With a Harvest Host membership (tell them Bowlus Road Chief sent you for 10% off), there are a couple of farms in the Prescott area that are great for off grid camping. Members of RV Golf Club have options in the area as well. For boondocking, we recommend the primitive Cooper Basin sites. You can camp for up to a week there. This is perfect for our Endless Highways model, which can stay off grid for a week (a record-shattering amount of time).

There are plenty of farms in the Prescott area, so we encourage you to cook up a farm-fresh breakfast on the dual burners in the Road Chief's galley. Then, head out for a morning hike. Prescott National Forest is a curious mix of desert and pine trees. It offers over 450 miles of hiking trails. Alternatively, you can hike around pine-crested Goldwater Lake or the sapphire waters of The Peacock Dining Room at the Hassayampa Inn. Seafood lovers will find a bite of heaven at the historic
